

Is it legal to have solar panels in Florida?

According to Florida statute, it is not unlawful for any entity to block residents from having solar panels. Furthermore, Florida Power & Light (FPL) does not mandate that solar panels be powered down when the grid goes offline during a crisis.

Are solar panels free in Florida?

In Florida, you are legally mandated to connect any solar panels you have installed to the local grid, which means you are never truly free. To make matters worse, during a power outage, even if your system can sustain your entire home and family, you cannot rely on it. You must power down your system and generators.

Does Florida have a solar rights law?

Are solar panels exempt from property taxes in Florida?

Since 2014, the installation of residential solar panel systems in Florida has been exempt from a homeowner's property assessment for their taxes. This means that the value of the solar panel system is not added to the home's value when assessing how much the homeowner should pay in property taxes.

Who can buy solar panels in Florida?

While anyone can acquire solar panels, building management must usually approve them if you're in a multiunit property. If you own a home, Florida's Homeowners Association (HOA) would perform an inspection before and after your installation. HOAs can't legally prohibit anyone from acquiring solar panels (or any other renewable energy system).

What if Florida refuses to install solar panels?

If the state refuses your request to install panels, you have the right to ask why. They can't say no without a valid, documented reason.
