

What is the best guitar solo in heavy metal history?

9. Megadeth - Tornado of Souls(Marty Friedman) Marty Friedman's exceptional guitar work on ' Tornado of Souls ' regularly tops lists for being the greatest solo in heavy metal guitar history. Marty is a player who focuses on melody rather than sheer speed,although he is very clearly capable of eye-popping speed when the time calls for it.

What is metallica's best solo?

They tie the entire song together and dramatize the points made in the lyric/verse melody. Fade to Black is Metallica's best solo,and the most emotionally stirring metal solo,a real masterpiece. I also want to say that I am disgusted by a lot of you metal elitists,&quot;Oh,I hate Metallica and only like Megadeth!&quot;

Does priest have a guitar solo?

Painkiller is the pinnacle of Priest's career and metal in its purest form. The solo's change in pace and horrifying mood swings are exactly the sound you'd hear if the Painkiller was within your vicinity. The ultimate heavy metal song is home to a guitar solo that fits it perfectly.

Did Judas Priest win a guitar solo?

Marty claims that he pretty much winged the solo and came up with it on the spot. Judas Priest has many great songs and guitar solos, but Beyond the Realms of Death is another level entirely. It's one of the most emotional songs in metal and far from your usual cliché power ballad.

What is a good solo / a song based on a pentatonic wanking song?

This solo is the best in musical terms. One is simple pentatonic wanking and simple tapping. Fade to Black isn't metal. It's a power ballad. Mr. Crowley is also pentatonic wanking that I like. Hangar 18, Lucretia, and Five Magics should be in the top five. Marty Friedman is God.
