

Does Seo make sense?

Because the organic search results are ranked by the Google Algorithm, SEO will make more sense to you with a basic understanding of Google's ranking system. Matt Cutts, the former head of the anti-spam team at Google, explains how Google search works:

What makes a successful Seo campaign?

Creating high quality and unique content is no doubt a building block of a successful SEO campaign. This process would consist of Content Planning, Content Creation, and Content Distribution. (Depending on the "priorities list" that is made in Opportunity Discovery, some of Technical SEO tasks might need to be done first).

How to get the highest leverage of Seo now?

As a result, business goals, buyer personas, branding, content strategy, and social media marketing should be taken into consideration. To get the highest leverage of SEO now, you must be a digital strategist, a social media marketer, a content strategist, a conversion rate optimizer, and a PR person to some degree.

How to rank solar company in XX country?

Don't just try to rank for "Solar company" please. You have to think harder than that. Solar installers should use "Solar Installation Company in XX City". Solar suppliers should use "Solar manufacturer/supplier/distributor in XX Country". And ideally also try to rank "xxx product in xxx country".

What is old Seo & why is it important?

Since the Panda Algorithm update in 2011, Google started to show the favor for unique and high-quality content more and more obvious. Additionally, the quality of backlinks, branded searches, and social signals weighs more and more over the years. Google always evolves. "Old SEO" is fundamentally different from "new SEO".
