

What is a flexible bulk container?

Flexible bulk containers, also known as flexible intermediate bulk containers (FIBCs), are a cost-effective way to contain and ship a variety of materials. They have a mesh design that allows air to circulate and are used to cover large furniture, machinery, and other equipment to protect against dust, dirt, and moisture. These bags have a cord lock to keep them closed.

What are recycling containers made of?

Recycling containers at McMaster-Carr are made of seamless heavy duty plastic and have two molded-in side handles. They are marked with a recycling symbol and have a durable bottom that stands up to dragging across the floor. These containers are made of plastic to resist cracks, dents, and leaks.

How do you identify small parts in a storage container?

To quickly identify small parts in a plastic container, color-code the containers. McMaster-Carr's plastic containers, also known as oil analysis bottles, have two openings: one for shaking and one for pouring. These containers are cleaned to have fewer than 10 particles larger than 10 microns per milliliter. Even when turned upside down, these containers keep fluids inside.

What is a rubber divider box?

Rubber divider boxes are containers with removable bins and adjustable dividers, coated with a protective layer to prevent rust and corrosion. A rubber gasket ensures a watertight seal. You can reconfigure the box without emptying the contents by adjusting the dividers to create the desired number and size of compartments.
